

New Jersey's Do Not Call law needs to stay in effect as is and in some cases perhaps should be stronger. Recently I was harrassed with repetitive phone calls urging myself or someone in my family to take part in an opinion survey; we received a call every 15 mins for 2 hours during homework/dinnertime. They would not stop calling even though I requested to be removed from the list. They finally stopped when my 8 year old son answered the phone and they tried to coerce him into giving the information and I threatened to report them to the police for child solicitation. I do NOT wish to be harrassed by ANY solicitations and due to past experiences NEVER even listen to any of the pitches (including political and opion type calls) if I am so unlucky to get one of the calls.
